

casual observers, and this, too, at a most moderate cost, for fitting a mouth with teeth (or, as it is technically called, "fitting a case," is one of the most difficult operations which can well be imagined, owing to the fact that not two people in a thousand "bite" alike, or, in other words, close their upper and lower jaw exactly even; the result is that the one jaw which protrudes, even if ever so slightly, necessitates special strength being given to the plate at the part where the principal strain is felt. That is if a plate be used at all; but Messrs. Eskill make a speciality of "Crown, Bar and Bridge" work, which consists of capping or covering the old formidable stumps with a gold cap entirely excluding the air, and serving as a support to the "bridge" which being attached thereto, serves as a base on which to affix the teeth required; of course this "bridge" is carried along, shaped to the jaw, and ending in another base fastened in a like manner. This is the latest invention of dental science, and by far the most simple and effectual yet invented: by means of this system the old style of unsightly (not to say dangerous) spring and wires is entirely dispensed with, and complete comfort in mastication is ensured; and not only this, but articulation is much more perfect as well as being far more easily rendered, while the facilities for cleansing the teeth are considerably enhanced. By means of the "crown bridge and bar" work, the necessity for drawing old stumps is absolutely removed; too much stress cannot be laid upon this, as in the case of teeth being required by either semi-invalids or the aged. Of course, the system of fixing to a plate is the cheaper, as only gold of the best quality will suffice for the "bridge" work, while the plates are made of a dental alloy, or even of vulcanite in the cheaper "sets"; but speaking, as we are enabled to do, from experience, we recommend all who require good and reliable teeth, at a small cost, to go to Messrs. Eskill and Sons, who are not only capable of executing thoroughly the very best of work, but also excel in their cheaper "set," from a single tooth up to a whole double case. This firm are also offering special terms to the Nursing profession, for which, estimates will be given after a personal interview.
