Fresh Pages.

IN noticing Dr. Maitland Coffin's "Obstetric Hints" in last week's issue, we gave the price wrongly as One Shilling; it should have been Two Shillings.

The Humanitarian (of New York), No. 1, vol. 1; Monthly, 10 cents. London Office: 17, Hyde Park Gate, W. This new venture is edited by Mrs. Victoria Woodhull Martin. From the manifesto with which the first number opens, we gather that the social questions of the day are to be threshed out in its columns; it does not represent the theorists of any particular school, but advocates a free discussion as the sole way of arriving at the truth of things. Being edited by a lady, women's work will doubtless receive the lion's share of attention.

The Sanitary Journal. (Mr. Alexander MacDougall, 81, Buchanan Street, Glasgow). Monthly, 6d.; has nearly a dozen articles of interest relating to the public health.

Report of the Howard Association for 1891 (issued from 5, Bishopsgate Street Without, E.C.). This Association was instituted with the laudable object of promoting the best methods of Treatment and Prevention of Crime, Pauperism, &c. It has just completed twenty-five years of its corporate existence, and is quite justified in looking back with satisfaction on the part it has played in the various improvements in regard to the treatment of offenders during that period. The Society incidentally take up the cause of the Prison Warders, who, they maintain, are over-worked and underpaid for a life which partakes so largely of the nature of the prisoners' life.

Our Quarterly Record. Quarterly, 3d. This is the Journal of the "Cathedral Nurse and Loan Society" of 17, Ellison Place, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. A body of educated ladies with a hospital training, who tend the sick poor in their own homes. An "Invalid Kitchen" has been instituted, and a Cottage Convalescent Home at Hexham begun. Services are rendered to all irrespective of creed. It is needless to say that the Society would gladly receive funds to help on its good work, no less than £1,000 being required to complete the Convalescent Home alone. "The Record" contains a paper on the nature and treatment of fainting.

Everybody's Pocket Cyclopædia. (Messrs. Saxon and Co., 23, Bouverie Street, E.C.) 6d. and 1s. This wonderful little book of general information has reached its 510th thousand, adding to its matter in each fresh edition till it bids fair soon to "embrace all knowledge."

Cassell's Shilling Cookery, edited by A. G. Payne. (Messrs. Cassell & Co., Limited, London). If the supply of cheap food were to keep pace with the supply of cheap cookery books, some of our great social questions would soon be solved. The "Shilling Cookery" contains upwards of 350 pp. of closely-printed matter. Besides the recipes, there is some useful information on carving, illustrated with figures. Nurses should take note of the chapter on Invalid Cookery.

Healthy Households. By G. C. Rothery. (Messrs. J. S. Virtue & Co., 26, Ivy Lane, Paternoster Row, E.C.), 1s. We can best explain the scope of this little work by quoting some of the chapter headings:—Water Lore—Personal Cleanliness—Soap and its Ready Analysis—Drainage—Kitchen Chemistry. The hints and warnings conveyed are useful, but are buried beneath a mass of facts which are not required, and certainly not likely to be read, by the busy housekeeper. For instance, in the section on flowers in rooms, instead of the long chemical disquisition, a couple of sentences as to the necessity for changing the water of cut flowers, and throwing them away as soon as they begin to droop, would have been far more to the point. The book wants cutting down to half its present size, and selling at half the price.
