

tones. On these occasions, I must confess we indulge in a little romance and sentiment, which I affirm vastly improves the quality of our work. But when our home station is reached, we throw off the traces of our harmless little day-dreams and assume a very practical front. To travesty a Scotch song, "he takes the high road, and I take the low" to our respective lodgings; that is to say, in fine weather he takes the High Street route while I go over the fields; in sloppy and muddy weather he takes the fields and I go by the highway. And so our secret is kept.

Truly yours,
AN ENGAGED ART STUDENT.

REPLIES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Miss Janet Flower, London.—We should advise you to wait; we cannot conscientiously advise you to do so under the existing régime.

Miss Hunter, Lewisham.—The scheme you mention has long been under the consideration of those who are interested in, and who know the real needs of Nurses. We hope you will be present on the 12th, when our Editorial Staff will be at home to our readers at 20, Upper Wimpole Street. We should be glad to hear from any of those who are interested in, and would like to help to organise, a library for Nurses; we have many promises of practical help.

Miss Tait, London.—Very pleased to see you at 12, Holles Street, on Tuesday at 11 a.m.

Miss G. Western, Birmingham.—There are so many first-rate Nursing Schools in your own town, why come to London? Enter as a regular probationer for a term of three years' training.
