A Second-Year Nurse. - We do not advise you to attempt A Second Year Nurse. — We do not advise you to attempt to study during your month's holiday. We think it is a mistake and you will return much fresher to your work if you take a real rest. If it is your general education you want to improve, you cannot do better than read some of Shakespeare's plays, or some good novels, such as those of Charles Kingsley, George Eliot, or George Macdonald.

These would be a real recreation, and at the same time it is most educational to become familiarised with the ideas and methods of expression of these writers. nurses will decrease. District Nurse, Birmingham.—We think that the amount of walking you do every day is quite too much for you to attempt. Why do you not tell your committee that you feel that it is too much for you, and ask them if they are disposed to provide you with a bicycle? We do not think you ought to attempt to undertake midwifery cases as well as general work. How can you possibly attend cases of enteric fever or cancer, which frequently occur in district work, and at the same time be liable to be called upon at any moment to attend a midwifery case? If your predecessor has done this, and so "created a precedent," the sooner you create another precedent the better.
