Notes on Hæmorrhage in the New-Born.*

By Miss NELLIE BREWER GOODWIN,
Graduate of St. Luke's Hospital Training-School, South Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

Labour began at 11 p.m., January 31st, and was completed by instrumental delivery at 9 a.m., February 1st. Respirations almost immediately established.

Child—female—weighed at time of birth 9 lb. 1 oz.

Parents of child both well and strong.

Child was bathed, dressed in flannel gown, and put in crib with hot water to feet. Child slept greater part of time for next forty-eight hours. Was apparently satisfied with hot water given from a spoon, until the morning of the third day, when milk came.

Child nursed well, going to sleep after nursing, sleeping unusually well.

During the afternoon of the third day, she threw up some material which looked like meconium;
