

A Nurse's Outfit for Canada.

Some little time ago amongst the answers to correspondents of a London ladies' paper the following notice appeared, addressed to a nurse:—
 "Canada—Outfit for New Brunswick, Canada—You can continue to wear Dr. Lahmann's admirable underclothing and corsets, choosing the texture suited to the coldest weather. Take good strong gloves, and thin and thick stockings; of the latter have two sizes,

SHADY HATS for winter are needed. In the very coldest weather gloves are replaced by WOOLLEN MITTENS, with no fingers, only a thumb. In the towns fur-lined leather gloves and worsted ones are worn. Chamois leather petticoats, flannel nightgowns, or the Lahmann material; COLOURED SPECTACLES and long gauze veils are a comfort. You will get most of the things at any of the London stores, such as Army and Navy, and at Silver's, Cornhill. Take all the furs you can, boas, cloaks, and capes. There is every reason why you should wear your nurse's uniform, but take with for you will probably be glad to wear two pairs at once. They make the houses very hot, so it is all the more necessary to dress warmly when you go out, and you must have very warm outdoor wraps. Cloth snow boots and leather leggings and LONG RUBBER boots you will want, and possibly MOCASSINS. Many people go out in thin shoes and stockings, with thick stockings over these, and then galoshes, and many have chamois leather drawers and vests over their other underwear. Fur caps, with ear flaps, and you the means of having warm garments underneath, and a fur cape or stole over when necessary."

 This advice has evidently been too much for Canadian sense of humour, and we here reproduce from the Montreal Daily Star its notion of what a trained nurse would look like when fully equipped according to English suggestions, together with this notice to the New Brunswick Police:—"Do not detain a lady dressed like this. She is perfectly harmless, and means well."
