As we go to press the International Conference on Nursing is being held in the Great Hall of the Musée Social, Paris. A full report of the proceedings of the Conference will appear in this Journal.

On Saturday last the party of Dublin Matrons passed through London en route for Paris, and were sped on their way at Victoria by Mrs. Bedford Fenwick, Hon. President of the International Council of Nurses, who presented to Mrs. Kildare Treacy, President of the Irish Nurses' Association, a basket of pink roses, decorated by a bow of soft broad pink satin ribbon. The largest contingent for the Conference, consisting of forty-two members, left Victoria in the best of spirits on Monday morning, arriving in Paris in the afternoon.

When the Queen visited the Mansion House last week and opened the Fête which bore her name, in aid of the Lord Mayor's Cripples' Fund, she did so by unlocking the principal gate of a model of old Temple Bar, which had been erected across the Salon. The ceremony was performed with a golden key handed to her Majesty by the Lord Mayor.

The objects of the Fund were explained by the Lord Mayor, who said: "The efforts which from time to time have been made to benefit the Crippled Children of London—efforts in which I have been privileged to take some part—have convinced me of the necessity of endeavouring to establish homes in which that terrible national scourge tuberculosis can be combatted at its source, and which, at once curative and educational, should provide home and education for the tuberculous stricken children of England. No institution of the sort at the present time exists, but in France and in Germany systematic and successful efforts are made on these lines. I am anxious to enter into a generous and friendly rivalry between the three friendly nations, and to show that what Germany can
