

and do subscribe to our various benevolent institutions, but they feel an unwritten law forbids them to receive any of their benefits.

How can he pay even 30s. a week for a Nurse, especially if the bread-winner be the patient, and that for long together?

The idea has my sincere sympathy, and would have my support as a developed scheme, but every care must be taken not to injure their feelings, or to destroy their independence.—Yours faithfully, W. L. R.

To the Editor of "The Nursing Record."

Sir,—Thank you for letting some one raise their voice against the great injustice of preventing Nurses availing themselves of the benefits of an association which has been founded by great Medical men and well-known Matrons for Nurses. I am at the same Hospital as your "Constant Readers," and we all want to know whether we are obliged to keep apart from the British Nurses' Association merely because the Matron does not approve of it?—Yours faithfully,

INDEPENDENCE.

[We are receiving shoals of letters upon this subject, and strongly advise, for her own sake, the Matron of one London Hospital to take an early opportunity to retract her opposition to her subordinates' desire to join this association.—ED.]
