A DOCTOR rushed into a house lately and wondered that the nurse or mother were not in the apartment with a child just waking from sleep. However, being in a hurry, and having a vial with him, he half-filled a glass he found on the table, and gave the child a dose of medicine. Then he bolted to his buggy and drove away. Later in the day, he learned that he had visited the wrong house, and that a policeman had him under observation as being insane.

SHE UNDERSTOOD CHILDREN.—Probably one of the most startling, unanticipated, replies on record was that of the “mother's help,” a young lady versed in all present-day female attainments, who, in reply to the address, “I want a person of some experience in the nursery—do you know much about children? cheerfully retorted, “Oh dear, yes, I've dissected a baby.”
