ROYAL MILITARY TOURNAMENT.

[COPY.]

Offices: 20, Buckersbury, June 10th, 1893.
Secretary, Jeyes' Sanitary Compounds Company.—
The Secretary of the Royal Military Tournament, in reply to enquiry, has the honor to inform the Secretary of Jeyes' Sanitary Compounds Company, that the disinfection of the Agricultural Hall during the course of the Military Tournament, was carried out by them in an admirably satisfactory manner. Upon each of the numerous visits paid by the Secretary to the various quarters of the Hall, no trace of any unpleasant odour of any kind could be detected, and he has much pleasure in certifying to the excellent way in which the work was done.

PERFUMES AND THE TOILET.

In the notice under this heading in our issue of the 15th, we were made to say that "The well-known firm of Messrs. Napoleon Price & Co., are also represented by the Royal Perfumery Co." These firms are of course one and the same, and their depôt is 27, Old Bond Street, W., and Aldersgate Street, E.C.

Letters to the Editor.

To the Editor of "The Nursing Record."

SIR,—I have noticed with interest the mention of our little Home for the dying in your columns, and the suggestion that we should merge our work in that of the kindred Institution at Hampstead. Cordially as we appreciate the work carried on there, there is a practical difficulty to our adopting your suggestion, and that is the fact that we are already over full here, and instead of contracting our work it seems desirable to increase it. Moreover, it is obvious to those who are practically engaged in the work, that there are grave reasons in favour of having several small Homes in preference to massing any considerable number under one roof. I am writing without consulting the authorities at Friedenheim, but I shrewdly suspect that they would cordially endorse what I say.—I am, dear Sir, Your obedient servant,

CLARA MARION HOLE,
Mother Superior S. James' Servants of the Poor.

[We quite recognise the force of our correspondent's argument for small Homes, but this does not affect our suggestion for an amalgamation of management of all such Homes. We still venture to think that union would mean greater strength, greater success, and therefore wider usefulness. But we are in earnest sympathy with our correspondent's own work and earnestly wish it the prosperity which we believe it deserves. Ed.]

It also tells about Dr. LANGEN'S Sugar of Milk, a natural and refined preparation of elements of little ones so containing the strength that the sad need.
