

connected with her six weeks' illness. So that her trip to this typhoid-stricken town was a most disastrous experience.

I should like to hear from any Nurses who may have had similar experiences, though I am very willing to believe that such a thing is most unusual.

Truly yours,
A BELIEVER IN PROFESSIONAL CLANNISHNESS.

REPLIES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Mrs. Evans, L. O. S., London.—We have consulted several of the leading obstetricians on the subject, and they are of opinion that a Home Hospital for lying-in patients of the better class would not succeed. They argue that wives do not like to be separated from their husbands at such a time, and that such a home, unless conducted on the private hotel system, with somewhat high charges, would not pay. Four rooms would thus have to be given up to each family—lying-in room, bed and sitting room for husband, and nursery. We shall be glad to talk the matter over with you if you will call at 12, Holles Street, W., any Tuesday, at 11 a.m.

Nurse S. P., Birmingham.—We have returned the MS., as the subject is more fitted for the lay press. Why do you not send us notes on Nursing? It would appear that you have "a pretty wit."

Miss G. Solway, London.—We have the matter under consideration and hope to carry it out in the spring for the benefit of the Nurses' Home of Rest at Brighton; we shall then gladly avail ourselves of your proffered help.

Nurse Colborne, London.—Eggs can be used in a variety of ways in the sick room, and as your patient is ordered so many it will be desirable for you to vary the methods of cooking, or the monotony of "egg diet" will be very trying.

Even poached eggs may be so varied in flavour that the patient will feel as if he is having a new dish each time. For instance, the nicely buttered toast may have a thick layer of finely chopped ham or minced chicken spread over it before the poached egg is added. Another time the toast may be spread with anchovy paste, or some of the soft ripe part of a tomato on the toast, just put in the oven for a few minutes, and the egg nice and hot placed on the top makes a nice little dish.
