Wing—as the Nurses' quarters are called—is charming and comfortable. From nearly all the windows a delightful view is obtainable of Sydney Harbour, which is considered to be one of the three beautiful harbours in the world. There is a pretty garden opening from the dining-room, where the Nurses may "walk abroad and take an airing."

The Nurses' bedrooms are very prettily furnished and decorated, and long after they have left their Training School they look back to the period of their probationships as among one of the pleasantest experiences of their lives. Miss Gould says: "Nurses who have left the Hospital to undertake the duties of Matrons in country districts find their greatest enjoyment, when spending a holiday in town, in visiting the Hospital and collecting fresh hints for their professional work." There could hardly be a greater tribute than this to the method of their training, and to the popularity of the Matron.

Beatty v, Cullingworth.

MISS ALICE JANE BEATTY, formerly Superin-tendent of the Nursing Staff at St. Vincent's Hospital, Dublin, brought an action in the Queen's Bench Division on the 11th instant against Dr. Cullingworth, obstetric surgeon at St. Thomas's Hospital, London, for damages, for having performed an operation upon her contrary, she alleges, to her expressed wish. The case was commenced, on Tuesday last, before Mr. Justice Hawkins, and the defence was that the operation was necessary, and that Miss Beatty consented to it. In 1892 the plaintiff was about to be married, when, in consequence of an internal disorder, she became a paying patient in the Home attached to St. Thomas's Hospital, where she was attended by the defendant. It was here that the operation complained of was performed, which had the result, it was alleged, of compelling her to cancel her engagement of marriage. The plaintiff was called and gave evidence in sup-port of her claim. She consented to an operation, but not such a one as that performed on her. At the conclusion of plaintiff's cross-examination it was agreed that, as the case could not be finished by the next day, to suit the con-venience of the Court, it should be adjourned until after the long vacation.

LIEBIG'S EXTRACT OF MEAT COMPANY. This well-known firm exhibited its preparation of extract of meat as prepared at Fray Bentos, in South America, and so universally used in the preparation of beef-tea, and in invalids' and general cookery; and also its Peptone of Beef (Peptarnis), which is manufactured especially for invalids, convalescents, and persons suffering from indigestion, and which contains a large amount of nourishment in the most easily digested form.

Messrs. REYNOLDS & BRANSON, of Leeds, whose ingenious contrivances are rapidly making their firm a household name in the Nursing world, exhibited an important collec-tion of instruments and batteries in connection with shadow photography, fluorescent screens, and numerous photographs of bones. Their bandage shoots and pill-box shoots; their self-closing, dust-proof drawers for storing dressings; their enema clip and their enema syringe cupboards, all of which attracted well-deserved attention, have been already described in these columns; but we have not yet referred to the Sparkling Puritzer-a new and absolutely pure aërated table water, prepared by distillation and introduced by this firm, and which both for its palatableness and its purity can be strongly recommended.

BLEESDALE, Limited.—This well-known firm of wholesale chemical manufacturers of York showed a valuable and interesting selection of pharmaceutical preparations.

BOVRIL, Limited, showed and explained the constitution of their well-known preparations, and proved that Bovril is the vital principle of the best Ox Beef, and is secured by dessicating and pulverising the lean meat at a low temperature by a special process, thus securing the entire nourishment of animal food in a form adapted to the feeblest and most sensitive system. Invalid Bovril differs from the ordinary form in being more concentrated and quite devoid of seasoning. Bovril Beef Jelly is extracted by a gentle heat from Ox Beef, and carefully packed in glass jars, so as to preserve it from all injurious contact with metal. The firm also showed Vril—a food which contains all the essentialelements of mother's milk, and is therefore especially adapted for infants; Kudos Cocoa,
