Editorial.

DISFEDERATION.

WE publish, in another column, a letter the importance and interest of which, to Nurses in particular, and indirectly, also, to the citizens of the British Empire, can scarcely be over-estimated. The writer, in forcible language, points out a fact which unhappily cannot be gainsaid—that the Nurses in the Dominion of Canada have determined to join hands with the Nurses in the United States in forming an American Association for the improvement and advancement of their profession.

We have the highest admiration, and publicly and privately have never been backward in expressing it, for the energy, the ability, and we would even say the statesmanship, exhibited by those who, in the United States, have been engaged in organising the Nursing profession for some years past. We are bound to confess that we feel the interests of Nurses in Canada can, from a professional point of view, be safely trusted
