Nurses for India.

The following nurses have also been selected for plague duty in India, in addition to those whose appointments we chronicled last week:—

Miss Aimee Mary Cockcroft, trained at Addenbrooke's Hospital, Cambridge.

Miss Julie Marie Louise Kendall, trained at the Royal South Hants Infirmary.

Miss Helena Reddich, trained at St. Thomas's Hospital.

Miss Margaret Poole, trained at St. Thomas's Hospital.

Miss Mildred Coulston, trained at St. Thomas's Hospital.

Miss Anne Maria Crowdy, trained at St. George's Hospital. Was on plague duty in India 1897.

Miss Mary Johnston, trained at the Middlesex Hospital.

Miss Margaret Ankett, trained at the London Hospital.

Appointments.

ARMY NURSING SISTER.

NURSING SISTER HILL leaves England to-day (Saturday) for the Cape.

MATRON.

MISS M. C. GOODNEY, who was trained at the London Hospital, and for the last three years has been Sister of Helena Ward in that institution, has been appointed Matron of the Infirmary, Plumstead.

SUPERINTENDENT NURSE.

MISS MARGARET FRANCES ROGERS has been appointed Superintendent Nurse of the East Preston Union Infirmary, near Worthing. Miss Rogers received her training at the London Homoeopathic Hospital, and subsequently went as pupil midwife to the Kensington Infirmary, and obtained the diploma of the London Obstetrical Society. She has held the position of Charge Nurse and Midwife at the Ticehurst Union Infirmary, and for the last four years Matron and Superintendent of Nurses at the East Grinstead Union Infirmary. On the resignation of the Master the Matron's post, as provided in the orders of the Local Government Board, became vacant. On her enforced retirement, the Guardians unanimously decided to give Miss Rogers an excellent testimonial and a gratuity of £50.
