if we wait until life is safe. We may be separated, we may lose one another altogether . . . Let us fight against it. Why should we separate? This is the only way. We two-who belong to one

The only way! But ah! A way of thorns!

G. M. R.

Dain.

By Alfred L. Donaldson.

I stood beside the lake at point of day, Before the youngest breeze had left its bed, While shaggy mists still lingered overhead Or rolled themselves reluctantly away. I tossed a stone; it made a splash, some spray, Some short-lived ripples—and then all was dead.

But still I saw it as it downward sped To unknown depths of liquid, leaden gray. So in the human soul sink stones of pain: We hear the splash and see the ripples leap. We feel the spray, perchance, and then-forget! We see a smile upon the face again, And yet we know that, if the soul be deep, That stone must still be sinking in it yet.

Fate—Destiny.

By Stephen Henry Thayer.

I am Mortality—Death is my doom: Matter in transit, a clod for the tomb;
A soldier of fate, for spoil or for fame; For love or for hate, for honour or shame. I am Mortality, born of her womb.

I am immortal; a prisoner set free; Destiny, careless of Earth's elegy; Soul winged of spirit, a star in the night; With Heaven to inherit, with God in the fight:

I am immortal, this my degree!
