

Practical Points.

A Sail Cloth Lounge. Miss Todd's article, published last week, has aroused considerable interest, and we have pleasure in giving some further details of the lounge which she has designed, and some illustrations furnished by Miss Todd which will make clear the measurements. The lounge is made by Messrs. Allen and Co., The Quadrant, Bournemouth, and the following are the exact measurements of a chair for adults :—

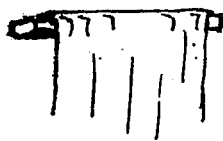

- (A) Length 52 in., girth 6 in.
- (B) Length 24 in., girth 6 in.
- (C) Length 47 in., girth 6 in.
- (D) Length 17 in., width 3½ in., flat surface on top to hold a mug.

- (E) Length 28 in., girth 5 in.
- (F) Metal joint, leaving 4 in. space between ends of c and E.
- (G) Length 14 in., girth 5 in.
- (H) Length 13½ in.
- Length of sailcloth for seat 94 in., width 15 in.
- Length for foot rest 50 in., width 14 in.
- (N) Length of roller cross-bars 18½ in., girth 4½ in.
- (K) Length 7 in.

This illustration shows how the sail cloth, forming the back and seat of the chair, is laced over the rounded bars forming the cross pieces. The round shape of these cross bars causes the sail cloth to move a little when the patient sits down, and so prevents it wearing thin in any one place.

Our last illustration is of the top of a lounge, in which the old method of nailing the canvas to a square cross bar is shown. The method designed by Miss Todd, of lacing, on the sail cloth, which is thus removable and washable, must be apparent to all.
