

A Cooking School at Charing Cross Hospital.

Now that Charing Cross Hospital has become possessed of a properly equipped school of cookery, the Council has adopted the suggestion made by Mr. Herman Senn (Hon. Director Universal Food and Cookery Association), to throw open the Cookery School for the use of Institutions or Hospitals, who are unable to include Invalid and Sickroom Cookery in their own syllabus.

The scheme proposed is twofold:—

(a) To provide a course of ten demonstration lectures for Private and District Nurses on Sickroom Cookery. Tickets transferable. Fee, £1 1s.

(b) To provide a course of Invalid and Sickroom Cookery for Probationers in training at other Hospitals, to be followed by an examination, held by the Universal Food and Cookery Association, who grant a certificate of proficiency.

Course of six lectures and twelve practice classes. Fee, £1 10s. A reduction of 5s. on each ticket if three Nurses attend from the same Hospital. The classes will be started in January if twelve names are sent in. It is proposed that these classes should be held in the afternoon. Application to the Matron, Charing Cross Hospital.

She has called on Miss Todd, on the Matron of the Hounslow Hospital, and elsewhere, and told the untrue story that she has lost an operation bag containing her money. She asked for and obtained money to return to the Cottage Hospital at Romford, the Matron of which institution knows nothing of Nurse Ethel Ford.
