WOMEN.

The passing of the Second Reading of the Women's Enfranchisement Bill, presented by Sir George Kemp, in the House of Commons, by the splendid majority of 167, on May 5th, and the fact that for four years in succession the House of Commons has passed the Second Reading of a Women's Suffrage Bill by a substantial majority, prove unmistakably the feeling of the House of Commons, reflecting that of the country. The only question which now awaits solution is: When is the Prime Minister going to give facilities for the further discussion of the Bill in order that Parliament may give effect to the will of the people?

Mrs. Garrett Fawcett, LL.D., President of the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies, writes in the Times that in the main the income of the Society "is derived from almost innumerable small subscribers, who, with unbounded generosity, give again and again out of their small incomes and slender earnings, because they believe with Mr. Roosevelt that political liberty for women will be the means of improving the status of women all over the world. I greatly prefer this as a financial basis of our Society to the thousands that may be contributed by a Rothschild to prevent Englishwomen from voting in their own country," and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, Honorary Treasurer of the Women's Social and Political Union, quotes in the same issue of our contemporary, as a "typical instance of the feeling of working women towards this movement, the case of an old woman in Exeter who, on attaining the age of 70 years, sent 5s. (the whole of the first instalment of her old age pension), expressing her regret that this was the first contribution she had been able to afford."

The Coronation year is to be signalled by the greatest procession of women ever seen in the world's history. On Saturday, June 17th, this procession will march from Westminster Embankment to the Albert Hall, where a mass meeting will be held. Every Suffrage Society in the Kingdom is to take part, and the Historical Pageant of Women, representing notable characters from the dawn of history to the present day, will add greatly to the picturesqueness of the procession. Miss Olive Smith, 4, Clement's Inn, W.C., will give all information to those willing to help.

Conferences of immense interest to the community will be held in Dresden on June 8th and 9th, during the Hygiene Exhibition. On the former date the German Branch of the International Abolitionist Federation will discuss "The Problem of Clandestine Prostitution," and Dr. Marie Stelzner will deal with the question: "Are there born Prostitutes?"
