

The Midwife.

A TYPE OF SUCCESSFUL MIDWIFE.

Look on the picture on this page and imagine the question: "To what profession does the figure there presented belong?" Would you not at once reply, "I am sure she is a midwife?" I think, also, you have only to look at her strong face to know that she is a successful practitioner. We admired her so much that we have reproduced her picture from The Visiting Nurse Quarterly, published in Chicago.

do appreciate defined educational advantages and legal status, and the continuous stream of nurses who study for and pass the examination of the Midwives' Board foreshadows what will be the result when trained nurses have a defined curriculum of their own profession, a State examination which they can pass, and a recognized status to which they can attain.

The next examination of the Central Midwives' Board will be held in London and in the provinces on Monday, October 23rd.

A TYPE OF SUCCESSFUL MIDWIFE.

THE EXAMINATIONS OF THE CENTRAL MIDWIVES' BOARD.

Nothing has been more surprising to the nursing world in general than the keen appreciation by trained nurses of the professional status in midwifery conferred by the Certificate of the Central Midwives' Board. Thousands of nurses who do not intend to practice as midwives have spent time and money studying for the prescribed examinations, so that they may add midwifery to their nursing qualifications. We always knew it would be so. Women

THE TRAINING OF MIDWIVES IN THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY, INDIA.

The by-laws of the Bombay Presidency Nursing Association provide the following regulations for the training of midwives. They are interesting as they prove that a much more comprehensive standard is required in Bombay than in England.
