

glass windows have been inserted through the munificence of Lady Tyler. In each of the twelve lights in the lantern is an angel, arranged in groups of three, and holding scrolls on which are inscribed the following texts, one text filling each of the four sides of the lantern.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

"Awake thou that sleepest, arise from the dead."

"Your life is hid with Christ in God."

"That which thou sowest is not quickened unless it die."

The angels are all looking down into the chapel. In the three-light window facing the altar the main subject represents the resurrection of our Lord. In the central light is the figure of our Lord, and on either side adoring angels. Below the central figure is a small picture of the high priest waving the sheaf of corn (the first fruits of the harvest) before the Lord (Lev. xxiii. 10-11). The blue and red curtain behind the figure of the high-priest represents the veil of the temple which hung before the Holy of Holies. Below the figure in the left side-light is a picture of the angel reaping the corn in the evening, and on the other side is the angel sower sowing the corn in the early morning. In this picture, on the right-hand side, may be seen in the middle distance the figure of the Good Shepherd leading his flock by "the waters of comfort." In the three lights above this window will be seen, in the centre, "The Lamb that was slain," and under the altar, "The souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held" (Rev. vi., 9). In the two lights on either side are attendant angels with censers. The three transom lights over the entrance represent children in heaven among the flowers. Below is the inscription, "Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

PATHOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT.

In connection with the self-contained pathological department the new central laboratory has been fitted and equipped by Dr. Margaret Tyler, and the Nurses' Home on the south side of Great Ormond Street, of which we not long since reported the laying of the foundation stone, will provide accommodation for the increased staff in most comfortable quarters.

The energetic Secretary, Mr. E. A. Attwood, is greatly to be congratulated on seeing the consummation of many hopes.

WELCOME HELP.

The President of the Society for the State Registration of Trained Nurses acknowledges with many thanks the following donations:—Miss C. Forrest, £2 2s.; Mrs. Wates, £1 1s.

Coronation Festivities.

Throughout the hospital world the Coronation has been celebrated with great hospitality and fun, and the following paragraphs may be taken as typical instances of the rejoicings.

At Hendon Infirmary, the patients had a most enjoyable time in celebration of this event.

The dinner to which they sat down on Thursday was everything that could be wished for in the way of a great treat. The lamb and green peas, followed by fruit and cream, gave indescribable pleasure. One patient said it was the thing she had longed for and waited for with longing eleven years, and now at last her wish was gratified.

On Friday, in continuation of the celebration, tea and coffee, with cake and jam, were generously provided for tea, and there was a certain amount of latitude allowed for the two days, there was singing in the wards, and the men were allowed to smoke, tobacco being also provided, and there were sweets for the women.

On the following Tuesday, June 27th, writes our correspondent, the staff had a supper party, preceded by sports, and followed by a dance, or for those who preferred it music and singing. The whole of the staff partook of tea at 4 p.m., and then adjourned to the grounds, where the sports were entered into with great spirit, and were enjoyed by all present, especially the obstacle race at the end, but few found courage to go through with that. It was an ideal day, and while great pleasure was taken in the home affairs, the attention of many of the visitors was attracted by the flying machines which were busily engaged close by, and came over our heads frequently, and we could easily see their occupants.

We are early people here, as we live so far out. All our visitors have to get away in good time, so that we brought our very happy evening to a close by the singing of "God Save the King," and "Auld Lang Syne," and by midnight everyone had been able to get the last train home, and all was quiet once again.

At the Royal Southern Hospital, Liverpool, the festivities commenced on Tuesday, June 20th, with a tea for the scrubbers, during which some of the nurses provided vocal and instrumental music. A similar treat was given to the laundry and domestic staff on the following day. On the morning of that day the Lady Mayoress, Mrs. S. Mason Hutchinson, visited the hospital and distributed gifts to the children, and paid a short visit to each ward. On Coronation Day there was a special service in the Chapel, entertainments, a distribution of Coronation medals, pipes, and tobacco for smokers, packets of tea for the women, with Coronation cups and saucers, and a good time all round.

At the Hospital for Incurables, Newcastle-on-Tyne, it was a most enjoyable day for all. The charming grounds were gaily decorated with bunting, and at the entrance hung a large banner inscribed with the words, "Your presence is our honour."
