

Association takes a great interest in this large hitherto neglected class, and have made arrangements for visiting them at their work, giving them occasional social evenings, and providing, as far as possible, for their spiritual and temporal comfort. These efforts to befriend them are much appreciated by the poor girls. The London headquarters of the Association is in Regent Street, exactly opposite the Polytechnic. Bar-maids are more respected as a class in the Colonies than in England. Actually in Johannesburg, so I was amused to read the other day, they form quite "an exclusive society." During the last few months there has been an attempt made to form an union amongst them, but it has proved quite abortive, the girls being too eager to secure situations at any price.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

(Notes, Queries &c.)

Whilst cordially inviting communications upon all subjects for these columns, we wish it to be distinctly understood that we do not IN ANY WAY hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents.

To the Editor of "The Nursing Record."

Sir,—If it is not out of place I should be grateful to you or any reader of our journal for some practical suggestions for the cure of stammering.

A youth of seventeen, in whom I feel great interest, is so afflicted, and being an apprentice it is a great drawback to him, and he is very sensitive to his defect. It is worse when spoken to suddenly or addressed by strangers. I told him I would make inquiries through the Record, and the young man is looking forward with great hope of relief.—I remain, Sir, yours respectfully,

HELEN DUNN, M.B.N.A.

To the Editor of "The Nursing Record."

Sir,—Although the quotation from the Medical Press and Circular upon the "Treatment of Hospital Nurses" was reprinted by you on July 31, I cannot for a moment believe that you agree with its sentiments. It would indeed be taking a retrograde step in Nursing matters to place the
