

nursing work under States, cities, public bodies, or voluntary associations.

Few of the old "Warhorses" are seen now at Conventions. Every year their numbers lessen but the young women are splendid and numerous as the sands of the sea.

Miss McIsaac may perhaps go out to the Philippines this winter on an inspection tour to the army hospitals and nursing quarters. Miss Delano says the Red Cross nurses did remarkable work in Ohio during the calamitous floods.

An interesting bit of news that you perhaps have already heard is that Miss Lina L. Rogers, Chief Nurse of the Public School staff in Toronto, has married Dr. W. E. Struthers, B.A., M.D.C.M. L.R.C.P. who is chief Medical Inspector of the schools under the Board of Education, Toronto. They were in town the other day and Miss Wald had a little party for them at the Settlement. That was a week or so before the wedding. I think this is all that would be of interest to you. Soon Miss Goodrich and several of us will begin to plan the International Programme for 1915.

Ever with best wishes,
L. L. Dock.

The picture of page 48 emphasises, more plainly than any words can do, the type of nurses who, with other women, are claiming the rights of citizenship in the United States, for whom, at present, saloon keepers throughout the Bowery and elsewhere, help to make the laws which they are compelled to obey! We congratulate Miss L. L. Dock, Miss M. A. Nutting, and all the other fine women who took part in this demonstration on its splendid success.

THE QUEEN OF GREECE'S NURSING SERVICE.

The ten nurses who in response to a request from the Queen of Greece to the Matrons of St. Thomas' Hospital, and University College Hospital, recently volunteered to join Her Majesty's Nursing Service, arrived in Athens last week and were at once sent on to Salonica.

The following fully trained nurses selected by the Matron of the General Hospital, Birmingham, in answer to a similar request, arrived in Athens on Friday, July 11th, Miss E. Keen, Miss M. Kent, Miss G. Pickman, Miss M. G. Smith, and Miss K. Tugman.

Eight nurses from the Royal Infirmary, Manchester, and two from a Nursing Home there have left for Athens.

Miss Cockshott and Miss Spooner members of the private nursing staff at St. Bartholomew's Hospital were also engaged by the Queen. They did not know where they would be stationed when they left London.

Miss Ierne C. Keogh, trained at St. Bartholomew's, and Miss Gregory at the London Hospital, both of whom have already been out at the war, were engaged by Princess Alice, and left at the same time; it was supposed that their destination would be Salonica.

NURSES' MISSIONARY LEAGUE.

"Camp 1913," organised in June at Sandsend by the Nurses' Missionary League, seems to have been a very inspiring gathering, as reported in Nurses Near and Far. "The word 'Sandsend' has become," it states, "surrounded with cherished memories in the minds of those members of the N.M.L. who gathered at Normanby House between June 14th and 28th. What visions it calls up of the happy excursions together, of walks and talks, of tea out of doors, of bathing and of cameras, and above all, of new friendships formed, new resolutions made, and deeply solemn gatherings, at which some new vision was seen of God and of His Call.

"The 'Campers' numbered thirty-one. . . Mrs. Hoare acted as hostess, and other officers included Dr. Ruby Glanville, from India, Miss Barnes, Miss A. D. Taylor, Miss A. M. Boyle, Miss Robinson, Miss Richardson, and Miss Macfee.

"Certainly no more delightful spot for Camp could be imagined. Normanby House stands in the midst of beautiful trees, looking across the little valley to the woods and hills, and with just a glimpse of the sea visible from the doorstep. Eighteen of the party were housed here, the others being in small cottages near by. Everything was done for our comfort by our kind landlady, and 'Camp' certainly had none of the disadvantages which attach to a proper camp under canvas. A very few minutes took us to the sea, with its lovely sands for bathing, and the never-ending fascination of the waters, sometimes so calm and blue, sometimes dashing in big, angry waves over the sea-front. A most cherished spot was the sea-wall, whither we carried our tea on several afternoons, to have it in the open air. Or, turning inland, there were the beautiful Mulgrave Woods, where we were allowed to wander at will by permission of the Marquis of Normanby, to whom the whole Camp owes its most grateful thanks, not only for this permission, but also for his most kind invitation to tea at the Castle one afternoon.

* * * * *

"The first half of the mornings and the evenings were reserved for meetings. On alternate mornings Miss Macfee gave Bible Readings on the message of the Bible to various classes of people, full notes of which are given in this magazine in place of the usual Bible Study Notes. On the previous page

next page