

NURSING ECHOES.

The statue of Florence Nightingale, erected in the grounds of the Royal Infirmary at Derby, was unveiled by the Duke of Devonshire on Friday, 12th inst., in the presence of a distinguished assembly of citizens. The Duke of Devonshire, in unveiling the statue, congratulated the sculptor on having faithfully brought out what he thought was the great characteristic of Florence Nightingale—her National Organization for Public Health Nursing in America. It is to be sold for the benefit of the Florence Nightingale Chair.

We hear there are the usual large number of applications for the position of Matron, to be vacated by Miss McCall Anderson at St. George's Hospital, London. The assistant matron, Miss Watson, has also resigned.

Dr. Robert Armstrong-Jones, of Claybury,

UNVEILING OF THE MEMORIAL STATUE TO FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE, ROYAL INFIRMARY, DERBY.

intense sympathy with all forms of suffering and sickness. He asked the Mayor to accept the statue as the memorial of a great English-woman.

The statue, which is of marble, sculptured by Countess Fedora Gleichen, is here reproduced.

Mrs. Arthur Aldis, of Chicago, has issued a pamphlet entitled "Florence Nightingale: an Appreciation," and has presented it to the makes known in the public interest that a Bill has just been drafted by a special committee of the Medico-Legal Society for the treatment of cases of early mental unsoundness without the stigmatizing medical certificate, and free from its legal disabilities. It is hoped to present it to Parliament at an early date. Trained nurses will be greatly in sympathy with any change in the lunacy laws which would provide appropriate treatment during the period of

previous page

next page