THE SECOND CANADIAN RED CROSS CONTINGENT.

Nothing has been more splendid during the war than the way in which the nurses of our Overseas Dominions have come to the help of the Mother Country, and everyone will desire that the services of these patriotic nurses should be utilised to the fullest extent. The second contingent of nurses sent by the Canadian Red Cross Society to the help of our wounded have now been over here nearly five weeks, and while they express themselves as deeply appreciative of all the kindness and hospitality which have been shown them, the object for which they foregathered from Prince Edward Island to Ontario, crossed the Atlantic, and braved submarines and torpedoes by the way, has in most instances been unfulfilled. Three of their number therefore recently called at the War Office and expressed to the Director-General the desire of members of the contingent for active service, when they were most gratified both by the cordiality of their reception and the promptness with which Sir Alfred Keogh furthered their wishes.

The next day they received instructions that those who desired to serve abroad were to put down their names at the War Office. Twenty of them did so, and the whole twenty were forthwith commandeered, received instructions to obtain their Military Nursing Service Reserve uniform with the money to pay for it, and are now under orders to proceed shortly to the Mediterranean, to Malta, or some further destination. For nurses proceeding to Malta and Egypt the grey hat is replaced by a white one with red, white and blue band.

The names of these nurses are Miss Jessie Milne Smith, Miss Bowman, Miss Perry, Miss H. Smith, Miss J. M. Smith, Miss Kaye, Miss Tuckett, Miss Wilkinson, Miss Seaman, Miss Macinnes, Miss Handley, Miss McDonald, Miss Oakley, Miss Papst, Miss Paquette, Miss Norton, Miss Cornell, Miss Dale, Miss Monk and Miss Lord.

Miss J. Milne Smith possesses credentials specially qualifying her for this service, as she helped to organise the nursing in the military hospitals in Greece, after the Græco-Turkish War in 1897 under the present Queen (then Crown Princess), being chosen for this honourable duty out of 49 applicants. She speaks modern Greek, and in the late Balkan War Queen Sophia telegraphed for her, and she helped to organise the nursing in Her Majesty's hospitals. She also worked for the Greek Red Cross at the front, within three miles of the firing line.

NO. 3 AUSTRALIAN GENERAL HOSPITAL.

The personnel of the third Military Hospital sent by the Australian Commonwealth, consisting of 36 officers, 80 Sisters, and 216 non-commissioned officers and men, has now arrived in England,
