OUR ROLL OF HONOUR.

Mr. Geoffrey Young, officer of the British Ambulance Unit for Italy, and formerly in command of the French Unit at Ypres, writes from Gorizia in a letter published in the Times :—

" Sister Julienne, one of the senior sisters of the Civil Hospital at Ypres, has just been reported killed by a shell. This saintly and devoted woman, well on in years, was one of the few heroic sisters who remained in Ypres during the first terrible bombardment, when the town was abandoned. She remained to care for a number of wounded Germans, nursing them until they were finally removed. A few days later she was one of those who returned when the Friends' Ambulance Unit opened in the cellars a ward for the wounded children and civilians. She remained through all the subsequent bombardments; one of the boldest fighters of the epidemic, one of the most courageous to issue under shell fire to fetch in the wounded and the sick.

" When the town was finally abandoned, she remained with one other sister, on her own initiative, at an aid post in the cellars, to nurse the wounded British soldiers. Only under compulsion did she at last retire to Poperinghe, where she remained to the end, nursing civilians and soldiers alike, under repeated bombardments until her death. She was custodian of the treasures of her hospital, and braved death constantly to visit or remove them. A gentle, sensitive, nervous lady, she was beloved by the wounded children for her sunny gentleness, and by those who worked with her for her refinement and humour. Nothing but a profound sense of duty and love could have supported her through peril and shock, sight and sound, such as proved too much for vigorous men. There may be many heroines in the war more conspicuous, but none whose courage was more tested, or whose motives and character were more beautiful."

The Cross of the Legion of Honour has been awarded to Madame Charlotte Maitre, a Red Cross nurse, wife of the Deputy for Saone et Loire.
