

The memorial to Edith Cavell, subscribed for by readers of the Daily Telegraph, is to be erected just above Charing Cross. Sir George Frampton, R.A., the great sculptor, is giving his work as a labour of love. The memorial, our contemporary states, will be of grey granite, in the form of a cross, to recall the faith which upheld Edith Cavell. From this arises another symbolic cross, the crown, as it were, of the composition. It is built up by a motherly figure — Humanity — bearing upon her knees a child. This babe, in the artist's thought, typifies the small nations. The right hand of Humanity is raised as if to guard the child against those who would do it wrong. The left hand rests upon its head in gentle love.

The monument bears a tablet inscribed with the place and time of Edith Cavell's death. Carved in granite is her name, and the words "Humanity, Fortitude, Devotion, Sacrifice," and under the word "Fortitude" is the lion of Britain crushing down Envy, Spite, Malice, and Treachery.

Against this setting in white Carrara marble will stand forth Edith Cavell, as depicted in the picture we here reproduce, by the kindness of the Editor of the Daily Telegraph. The conception is one "of a noble simplicity, a deep tenderness, inspired by a pure and lofty courage and a living faith."

Miss Raphael Murray has received the much-coveted Mons ribbon for her services during part of 1914. The Mons Star will follow in due course. Miss Murray is a trained nurse, but the decoration has been bestowed for her services as interpreter and organiser in France, where she superintended a large nurses' home at Calais. She is a member of the Catholic Women's Suffrage Society.

The Convener of the War Hospitals Supply Depot, 20, Burnbank Terrace, Glasgow, appeals for additional workers who are urgently required to meet the large requisitions which are being received from France. During the month of March 35,457 bandages and dressings and 24,870 bags of sphagnum moss were produced at this depot, and the number of daily attendances for the month was 4,801. During the same period the War Hospitals Supply Depot at St. John's Road, Pollokshields, produced 61,680 bandages, &c., and the attendances numbered 3,007.

SOCIETY WAR WORKERS AND THEIR MAIDS.

In spite of the tremendous difficulty of transport we hear society women "nursing in France" and otherwise disporting themselves abroad apply for passports for their ladies' maids, and that it is not unusual to credit these "luxuries" with all sorts of useful functions so as to retain their personal services for their own comfort. This is a scandal which it is high time should cease, and perhaps under the new dispensation at the War Office action may be taken to curtail these class privileges. We speak from personal experience on this
