Sister Bellamy of the Registered Nurses Society, London, who was one of the nurses detailed to nurse the Crown Princess of Greece during her recent serious illness, was delighted to receive from Her Royal Highness, as a parting gift a lovely little brooch—a diamond surrounded with rubies, set in an oblong bar of platinum. Sister Bellamy treasures this gracious memento the more, because it really belonged to the Princess, who evidently realised the added value of this personal touch.

THE WOMAN'S MOVEMENT IN FINLAND.

Women in Finland have always shown themselves full of the progressive spirit, and their suffrage activities won them the vote in 1906, and gained municipal representation in 1918. Suffrage in Finland is granted to women on the same terms as men, and there are to-day twenty-one women Members of Parliament, who keep a close watch on all Bills relating to women and children. There is hardly a community in the Republic of Finland, recognised by the Supreme Council in 1918, in which women are not members of the municipal council or where they are not members of committees, and even in the remotest districts the women show themselves keenly interested in municipal and national affairs. In the elections of 1919 and 1921 women played an energetic and intelligent part; and they are elected members of the chief committee of all the party political associations.

A State Commission, which has recently been handling a Bill concerning the property rights of women, contains two women members; and the commission unanimously recognised the following principles, several of which are particularly interesting to English women in view of certain recent cases.

r. The guardianship of the wife by the husband is to be abolished.

- 2. The property rights of husband and wife shall depend upon their personal property; but when the marriage is dissolved, either by death or by divorce, both the husband and wife shall have a right to half the other's property.
- Both parties are under obligation to manage their personal property with due care and economy.
- 4. Husbands and wives are by mutual arrangement allowed to alter their property rights during the marriage.
- 5. Husband and wife have equal rights regarding the management of home affairs and the upbringing of their children.

Finland under Rusian rule was a poor country; and the conditions prevailing during the years from 1914 to 1919 were extremely difficult. Russia invaded Finland in 1914, and in 1918 war was actually waged on her territories. The country was cut off and completely isolated from food producing states; and the normal conditions of life were greatly disturbed. The women of Finland played a great part in the averting of actual starvation by their organisation of schemes to cultivate and preserve food products, and their work in the formation of small holdings. Furthermore, they opened workshops at Helsingfors, where hundreds of poor women received instruction in needlecraft and household industries the while they received an adequate salary. In 1918 the Finnish Government put the seal on the admirable work by opening a Central Bureau for Women Workers, which regulates the hours of labour, salaries, etc., and is entirely supervised by trained women.
