FINAL EXAMINATIONS, OCTOBER, 1925.

Fourteen Candidates presented themselves for Examination in Edinburgh, 19 in Glasgow, 3 in Dundee, and 6 in Aberdeen.

Ten candidates entered and all passed, both in the first paper on Medical and Surgical subjects, and in the second paper on Nursing and Cooking. None failed in the Oral and Practical Part.

Fever Nurses' Examination.

THE PASSING BELL.

*"I would the light of reason, Lord,
Unto the last might shine,
That mine own hand might hold my soul
Until it pass to Thine."*

How often have those who were wont to attend the service at St. Alban's, Holborn, on Sunday afternoons which Father Russell had made peculiarly his own, sung the above words, while he drew forth sweet music from the organ. It is good to know that this wish was fulfilled, and that, conscious to the last, he asked for a drink of water and peacefully passed away. Glad as he was to pass over (his friend, the Archdeacon of London, tells that when told he was homeward bound his reply was "Good news! Good news!") he took a keen interest in current events, and he had the wireless extended to his bedroom so that he could hear Big Ben strike once more. What he was to nurses during the half century he acted as Chaplain General to the Guild of St. Barnabas, they alone know. Beloved of the St. Alban's School Children, it is told that once when shown a picture of the Good Shepherd, and asked who it was, they acclaimed it as "Father Russell." We do not grudge him his long deferred rest, but the world seems an emptier place without him.
