"FENLON PATENT SELF-ACTING WASHING MACHINE" (Messrs. Fenlon & Son, 8, Tudor Street, Temple, London, E.C.) will come like a boon to many. This exceedingly useful invention is mostly composed of block-tin (so there can be no fear of iron-moulding the clothes), the exceptions being that it is copper bottomed-tinned; beside this, the flow and return tubes to which the boiler beneath is connected are all made of the same metal, which will illustrate that its general lasting properties are secured in the parts that are most liable to wear out. Running lengthwise inside from nearly the centre of this machineto almost its two outer edges are two covered tunnels of copper-tinned, and near the top of each of these are three medium-sized holes. The tunnels are in direct communication with the two outer under-pipes only, so
